Press the key combination Win + R. Then, enter msconfig and press Enter. On the Boot tab, under Startup and Recovery, select the No Items check box. Press OK. You should see a new item appear with the entry Power button. Press OK. Save your settings and reboot. Note: This feature works on Windows 7 and later. Set your screen to turn off after a set period of time This program will help you to set a timer that is configurable and will shut down your screen within a specified period of time. There are many reasons that make you want to shut down your computer like a good example: keep your data safe, take a break or just turn your screen off for a quick nap. Almost everyone would want to have a customizable shutdown setting, but sadly we all know that you can only specify the time and if the screensaver is on or off. Well, this program gives you the option to have a timer of your own, or shut your screen down as soon as you lose focus on it. KeyMacro 1.0 brings two new features to your PC and your MAC. - You can now run the same macro on both, using one button. - You can also run a macro on certain macros. Contact Macros: Run a macro on any keystroke (except shift and num lock) and you have a new keystrokes. Run a macro on any change in buffer contents and you have a new context. Run a macro on any change in buffer position and you have a new task. New Button: You can now run a macro on any keystroke (except shift and num lock) using a button instead of a macro. Append mode on macros: You can now add a macro that will always be executed. Add one new button to each macro. Append mode on contexts: You can now append the following context to a macro: %3 cursor& %5 file & %7 working directory Running macros on change: You can now run a macro on any change in buffer contents and you have a new context. More with this program: 1. KeyMacro will work with any number of the Macros (.m files) that you have created with Macros 1.x. This was not possible with KeyMacro 1.0, as you had to use a Macro Buffer file (.mfb). With this version of KeyMacro, you can import any Macro that you have made with Macros 1.x or 2.x. - Running a Macro on any keystroke (except shift and num lock) and you have a new keystrokes. 2. You can now run a macro on any change in buffer contents and you have a new context. For example, if you are writing a macro that works on the contents of the buffer, you can have the macro execute once the buffer is changed. This is useful when you have a macro that monitors the buffer and reacts differently based on the contents. 3. Run a macro on any change in buffer position and you have a new task. This is useful if you have a macro that monitors the buffer position and does something based on how the cursor position is changing. 4. You can now run a macro on any keystroke (except shift and num lock) using a button instead of a macro. 5. Append mode on macros: You can now add a macro that will always be executed. Add one new button to each macro. 6. Append 2cdc1e01e8

Auto Shutdown is a simple tool that comes equipped with the minimum elements you need when it comes to computer power management. It definitely needs some improvements but it doesn't freeze or crash. We recommend it to all users. "Autoshutdown is a must have tool for anyone that cares about their system stability and performance. Auto Shut Down works as it should and doesn't need any additional setup and support." "It provides several options to configure when the computer should shut down: Shut down, reboot, log off. You can select the time that the computer should shutdown and whether you want to log off, reboot or shut down the computer. I have mine set to shut down automatically after an hour, but I can also change that to something like 2 minutes, 2 hours, 6 hours or even a whole day. You can also select the power level of the computer to shut down. There's a lot more than you can configure but I think this should get you started." "This program is a must for anyone that uses a computer. All you have to do is run the program and set the schedule to choose the time of day to shut down. I keep mine set to shut down at 7:00pm every night and it works like a charm." "AutoShutdown is a great program to help you set up your system, I love it! AutoShutdown can shut down your computer on a schedule, it takes only seconds to start up and shut down your computer and it is very easy to use." "I love Auto Shutdown. It is fast, it works and I use it every day. I put in my hours and I choose the time I want my computer to shut down, even if I am traveling. It is easy to use and I highly recommend it." "This program is amazing! I use it all the time to shut down my computer. I never have to worry about when the computer will shut down and it does a great job of shutting it down." "I use this program every day to shut down my computer on a schedule, I like the easy of use, the option
